

Class Exercise
for EDHI 9050

Power and Politics

One of the current buzzwords in higher education is “assessment.” Some analysts have suggested that assessment efforts are systematically biased toward finding the assessment target successful. Others have suggested the converse. What are the factors that might produce one effect or the other? What are the implications for organizational learning?